WHAT IS A WIFE?

A wife is the girl you married. She likes flowers, chocolates, smart clothes and going places, as much as the day you married her. If you can't give her these, a kiss that says "I love you" will do.

A wife is a steam laundry, a house-cleaning service, a cook, a commissary and a lavatory-attendant to your babies. She is a mother, nurse, counselor and a sock-darner.

She is a detective and quickly locates the screw driver that you left right there three weeks ago and that the children have carried away. A wife is a magician. Your favorite shirt appears where she said it was when she comes to look for it, and in a flash she can produce order in a house that you and the children have run through with a bulldozer.

A wife licks your wounds, bolsters your ego and has faith and persistence that makes you move mountains. She is a safety valve when you must blow off steam at some one. She knows you as a small boy at heart who has never grown up and that when you have a cold it is much worse than when she has a cold!

A wife must have the patience of Job, the wisdom of Solomon, the endurance of Atlas and a sense of humor, but never, never show it when you are in a temper!

A wife spends her afternoon preparing your favorite meal for the night you ring at 6 o'clock to say that you are working late at the office.

A wife is the girl you married, although fatter or thinner, more certainly older. She might be even a bit dull but look in the mirror, sir! Are you still the handsome, gay, carefree dog you used to be? Honestly now!

A wife understands you, needs you, loves you. In the world of men you may feel like crumbling limestone, but the minute you step through your door You are her Rock of Gibraltar!

Letter To The Editor

The supreme test of the year for the Postal Service of Canada comes at Christmas time, when the millions of cards and gifts which Canadians exchange with their friends and relatives both here and abroad must be handled in the few short weeks before Christmas Day.

In meeting this test, the Postal Service of course makes very extensive internal preparations to cope with the flood of mail, but each year also it solicits co-operation from the public in mailing early so that the emergency schemes set up can be made as effective as possible.

The co-operation extended by the public in this respect has been increasing from year to year as more and more people come to realize its importance to a satisfactory mail service at Christmas, and it is a pleasure for me to be able to state that in the rush period just closed, this co-operation was in evidence to an extent never equalled before.

Generally speaking because of the co-operation received from the public, most post offices were back on a normal operating basis, one, and in many cases, two days before Christmas, and I am sure you will agree was a very satisfactory result.

On behalf of the Postal Service of Canada, I wish to thank the public for the assistance so considerably given through a very difficult period, and also the newspapers for the part they played in making their readers aware of the need for co-operation in mailing early.

W. J. Turnbull
 Deputy Postmaster General

WELDING SCHOOLS

Mr. Charles A. Cheshire, Alberta's Extension Engineer advises that ten welding schools are being held through out central and southern Alberta during the months of January, February and March this year.

The attendance at these courses is limited to 24 who can actually do the practical work. The instructor, Mr. Kris Jensen, is a welder who for some time has been working on the pipelines in Western Canada and who last year instructed at the pipeline Welding School in Edmonton.

The Calgary Power Company and Canadian Utilities are cooperating in providing a large enough service to accommodate the transformer type welders, and are also providing one of their men to connect and disconnect the portable equipment. In addition they are providing the electricity free of charge.

The course is free, selection of the applicants to attend the course will be left in the hands of the District Agriculturist or a committee with whom he is working. Mr. Cheshire reports a limited number of schools this year are being tried and it is hoped that in 1956 - 7 a somewhat expanded program can be in operation.

School will be held, February 6th to February 10th in Warner.

The courses start at 9AM on Monday and last through Friday afternoon.
